MARRIAGE AND MORALITY.

Next of the life in Europe and the social consequences--The Case in a Religious Point of View.

A London weekly journal of December 18, treats the above subjects in the following words:

A generation or two ago, when English pride was at its highest, it was the fashion to dwell with much satisfaction on the superior morality of Protestant countries, and England, in particular, compared with that which prevailed in Roman Catholic lands. Fashions, however, change; Romanism attained something of a premium in distinguished British circles, Protestantism falling to a discount. And then the bold assertions of Romanists themselves in favor of their creed began to receive credence. It slipped somehow into a kind of maxim that Romanist populations are more moral, in the common ecclesiastical sense of the word, which regards especially the relations between the sexes, than communities of the reformed faith.
This was the kind of concession graciously made by persons of liberal religious opinions to zealous Romanists: "You are, no doubt, superstitious and ignorant people; but it must be confessed that you have an advantage over us in point of what is specially called morality. The mass of your believers are sounder in this respect, both in principles and conduct; great is the virtue of the confessional to keep ordinary people in the straight road." And the pretention thus politely conceded has been employed with abundance of self-laudation by the zealous persons, chiefly converts, who devote themselves to magnifying the glories of their persuasion in public writing and speaking. But there lies an appeal beyond all this loose talk to an unimpassioned tribunal--that of statistical analysis. And this proves (assuming the figures to be correct) that the respective sensual morality of European countries, if tested by the number of illegitimate births (and no other test can well be devised), has no relation whatever to their respective creeds. Here are the figures as given by M. Maurice Block in his very valuable work, "L'Europe Politique et Sociale."

Of all the European countries, that in which by far the greatest relative number of natural children is born is Bavaria, a country of which two-thirds of the people are Catholic, and exclusively Catholic, and in which "the confessional" is more of a real institution than almost anywhere else. In Bavaria the illegitimate births amount to 20.7, or nearly 21 per cent. of the whole. Next come Saxony and Wurtemberg; the first exclusively, the second chiefly Protestant. In these illegitimate births amount to 15 and 11.7 per cent. respectively. In Sweden and Norway (Protestant) they are 9.3 and 9.2; in Austria (very Catholic), 8.9. Next to these comes a list of countries comprising, in fact, the greater part of Europe, to which the illegitimate birth-rate is singularly uniform; nowhere much below 7 per cent., and nowhere attaining 8.
These are--taken in order of immorality, beginning with the worst-- Belgium, Russia, Italy, France, Prussia, England. Of Ireland there are, we believe, no trustworthy returns, but common opinion makes it rank very favorably in this respect. Below the countries thus enumerated, and therefore the least exceptionable of all, come Catholic Spain with 5.4 per cent., at last, Protestant Holland with only 4 per cent., which thus attains the European "prize of virtue."

These diversities are very far from admitting of easy, or, indeed, any explanation from such materials for knowledge as we possess. Something is due to legal institutions. For instance, the three German countries which rank worst on the list all possess peculiarly restrictive codes of marriage laws, which restrict honorable matrimony and render irregular but durable connections--"wild marriages," as the Germans oddly but expressively call them--more common than they otherwise would be. And the same obstructive legislation prevails more or less in other continental countries.
But this has no relation to religious questions. And the simple conclusion which we wish to draw is, we conceive, undeniable, that it can not be proved, or rendered probable, that the religion prevailing in any European country, taken apart from other causes, influences at all the number of illegitimate births. Religious partisans should therefore be very cautious before they endeavor to make capital for their own faith out of the weaknesses and sins, which they can charge to the account of heretical populations. They lay themselves open to crushing retorts.

Better acquiesce in Gibbon's impartial conclusion, that religion--in the partisan sense of the word--is "all-powerful to impel, powerless to stem the stream of national manners."

Hans and the Ducks.

Everybody about Timbuctoo, up in Yuba county, knows Hans Himeltausen, or, he is usually called,
"Dutch John," as a good-hearted, jovial Tervon, once well off, but now reduced to the position of a Fume Guard.

Hans goes out hunting once in a while. He went after ducks not long since. You can't get him to go after them again. The reason is this: Some of the boys played him a trick. They got a couple of wooden decoy ducks, and fastened them with a string in the edge of some bushes in a little pool near the pond, where they could be seen as the wind wafted them out the length of the string.

Hans was told that a couple of wild ducks were in the pond, and hurrying to his quarters he got his gun, loaded it heavily, and crept down within range of the ducks.

Taking good aim, he fired, and the ducks were sent with a rush back into the bushes by the shot.

Hans thought, of course, he killed them, but stopped to load; in case they were only wounded. Meantime the wind, blowing through the bushes pretty sharp, blew them out on the water to the length of the string again.

"Der tyfult I shooted dem tooks once?" said Hans, in astonishment.
"Now dey schwims out like as dey were never shot with a gun, not all!
I makes 'em hell schnell dis time!" And again took a liberate aim and let fly.

The force of the shot instantly drove the ducks in out of sight, and Hans dropped his gun to go after them. But, before he had got twenty yards he saw to his astonishment that the ducks were swimming out as before unharmed.

He halted, in half wonder, half terror.
"Mien cot!" he muttered. "Two time I shooted dem tam tooks! and two times dey come out again just as before. I tink dey is de tyfult-est look! I tries again--zee if I tont!"

And again, with a double load of both powder and shot in his gun, Hans drew for the ducks. He fired, and end over end turned with the recoil. When he got up not a duck was in sight.

"I shoot 'em all to pieces dat time! he cried, as he rubbed his lame shoulder.

Just then out floated the ducks again.
"Mien cot in himmels! Tey is tertyfult tooks!" groaned Hans-- "Three time I shoot 'em all over tead, and dere dey is alive!"

"I'll bet you two fifty they're dead!" cried Tommy Newber, with a smile.
"Himmels! can't I see dem swim!" cried Hans.

"Two fifty you've riddled them-- and two fifty they're dead!" cried Tom.

"Himmels! I bet you dat. But how we broke it! You can't catch 'em!"

"Yes come along with me and I'll catch them for you!"

There was some tall swearing in Dutch when Hans paid over the $2.50, and found out how he had been sold.

If you want to see a mad Dutchman, just say "ducks" to Hans, and you'll be accommodated.

and, in accordance with the expressed right in section 6 of said law, fixed our fermenting period at seventy-two hours; that with this fermenting period we have successfully operated, have paid promptly and fully the tax on all spirits manufactured by us; that under the present law and fermenting period, we do not believe, with honest officers, the payment of tax can be avoided; and without honesty on the part of storekeepers, gaugers, collectors, and assessors, we do not believe it possible to collect the tax from those who would evade it. It may be suggested that we have not tested the forty-eight hours' period ourselves, and cannot therefore speak from experience, and that in some instances it has been worked successfully. In reply to this, we say, throughout the distilling season, we have "beer," or mash, of forty-eight hours' standing. We know at this time the "beer" is not "ripe," and would be run at a loss. If some have succeeded, they possess a yeast unknown to us.

It is suggested that we shall actually test the proposition by a few weeks' "run." We protest that we would do so at a heavy loss. Who would pay the damage?

We have expended large sums of money from time to time to meet the changes thought proper and required by the Hon. Commissioner at Washington, and he will readily understand that it is not in a spirit of captiousness that we ask a revocation of this order.

We have laid in grain and entered into contracts with stock men for feeding; and if allowed time to consume the grain on hand, and close up our contracts for feeding, we prefer to close our houses rather than risk fermentation in forty-eight hours. Therefore,

Resolved, 1st, That we respectfully ask to be allowed to continue our present fermentation period of seventy-two hours.

2, That if such right will not be granted, we ask that we be allowed time at present fermentation period to use up grain on hand and settle our stock contracts, when we will be ready to close our houses.

3, That in case neither request is granted, we respectfully ask to be notified of the fact by the Honorable Commissioner at Washington at his earliest convenience.

4, That our Assessor, Edgar Needham, Esq., be requested to forward a copy of these proceedings to Hon.
C. Delano, Washington City.

WINTERING THE OLD WOMAN--A RO-MANCE IN CHICAGO REAL LIFE.

Yesterday morning, about 10 o'clock, an elderly, serious looking individual, well protected from the inclemency of the weather by sundry layers of overcoats and comforters, entered the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court in a methodical manner, and after spending about ten minutes in unwrapping himself to a sufficient degree to enable him to speak, expended the same period of time in slowly looking around him.

After carefully investigating the surroundings of the highly ornamented office, the old gentleman's eye rested upon the bland features of one of the most gently and benevolent of living deputy clerks.

Leaning toward him, he seriously enunciated this important monosyllable, "Cap!"

The personage thus addressed inquired for further particulars.

"Cap," repeated the stranger, "are you given to unitching folks here?
Do you divorce a little?"

The reply to this interrogatory was of a somewhat affirmative character, whereupon the questioner stated his grievance, after reluctantly admitting that his wife had not deserted him--neither had she been guilty of adultery, cruelty, drunkenness, nor any of the other little eccentricities to which the law allows a dissolution of the marital bonds.

"The old woman, Cap," quoth he,
"don't get along well with me. She jaws me fearful and if any man can stand jawing his name is not mine.
We don't get along very well together, and haven't for the last thirty years. I, therefore, want to be unitched, and I don't want her to know anything about it until it's all over.
I want it done now, because it's getting cold weather, and it will take a good deal to winter her. Can I get divorced here without finding it out for a spell?"

"My friend," responded the official, suavely and kindly, "see yo yonder desk?"

that a suit for divorce has been commenced. They will rush for the papers, and brutally assault each other for the first chance to scan their contents, and then they will write for four hours apiece. They are newspaper men, and will write you up for publication. They are probably now in the next room, doing the same thing for somebody else. They will write an article about you with thirty-seven head lines. They will print all you know about yourself, and all that any one else knows, and a great deal that no one knows. It may, of course, do you good, but of that you will have to judge yourself. You can't get rid of them for they are affluent and incorruptible, and it won't be of any use to kill them, for at their offices they keep men a great deal worse than they are."

"Cap," slowly and sadly asked the now frightened suitor, "is that all true?"

"It is true, all of it, and less than the truth."

"Then," said the old man, with a melancholy air, as he proceeded to again envelop himself in his multitudinous wrappings. "I guess I'll winter the old woman after all. I'll come back again next year, and then, perhaps, these fellows will be dead."

And silently and sorrowfully the disappointed one pulled his hat over his eyes and quietly stole away.

Mississippi.

The radicals have been reconstructing Mississippi for nearly five years. They have been making laws, within that time, that they hope will never be applied and enforced upon them—and have been reconstructing the Constitution of the common country, because it did not suit them—and with all the power, and all the money, and all the so-called brains on their side, they have but just put Mississippi in the Union, to be kicked out again as Georgia was, (when it pleases their ideas to do so,) the instant that the State dares to exercise her sovereignty or proposes, in any particular to show a preference for a white man.

Mississippi is now reconstructed. A Yankee upstart called Ames, who has had Military control of that State, under his master Grant, has been elected by a Legislature composed of niggers, &c., to represent them in the United States Senate. Of course he don't represent the State proper, (we mean the white people,) because his soul is too black, and his conduct in Mississippi has been that of an unprincipled creature. Ames was not, nor never has been a citizen of that State. He has no interests in common with that people, (black or white,) no more than the fiends of Hell have with the Angels of Heaven. He is beneath the scum and Carpet Bagger, and if any name can be given him, whereby he could be classified, it has not been promulgated. His name is Ames, and he has forced the nigger Legislature of Mississippi, with Yankee soldier bayonets, to make him a Senator.

Ames is no doubt a great man, but his greatness consists in his being a great political scoundrel.

At the same time that Ames was elected, Mr. H. R. Revels, a colored gentleman was chosen as Ames' colleague. Mr. R., is no doubt a native of the State, and will represent the colored people, in a better manner than Ames, for the negro has an interest in the State, while Ames has none.

The practical workings of Northern radicalism, socialism, and negro equality, will now be seen in all its phases, and but few months will pass before this radical party will desire when it is too late, to undo the monstrous evil they have done in the fraudulent enforcement of the Fifteenth Amendment.

The Fifteenth Amendment.

The people of Ohio through their Legislature have adopted the Fifteenth Amendment, which is as follows:

"ARTICLE 15. SEC. 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States, or by any State, on account of race, color or previous condition of servitude."

"SEC. 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

The people of that State not long since declared most decidedly, that they were opposed to conferring the right of suffrage upon the negro. They decided the question by a majority of fifty thousand against the right of the colored man to vote, but their Legislature has decided that the Ohio people shall vote with the negro—shall equalize themselves with the negro. The contest is now between the people and Radical demagogues.

George D. Prentice.

George Denison Prentice, died at the residence of his son, near Louisville, on the 21st instant, after a lingering illness of some weeks, aged 67 years, 1 month and 4 days.

Mr. P. was editor of the Louisville Journal, until it was consolidated with the Courier, taking the name of both papers, and in its columns he exhibited his faculties of wit, his great talent as a fluent and eloquent writer. Twice within a few years did he hold the political destiny of Kentucky in the palm of his hand; first in the Know Nothing times of 1855-7. Again in 1860, Mr. P., and his paper held Kentucky in the balance, and at last bound her in the chains of the Federal Government.

The New State School Code.

As the present Legislature will, in all probability, adopt, in the main, the new school code, as drafted by the Superintendent of Public Instruction, I propose, in the present article, to notice, in detail, a few additional departures from the old law.

Under the law, now in force, the apportionment of the School Fund is made according to the number of children in the State between the ages of six and twenty years, as reported by the assessor, or by the commissioner to the Superintendent of Public Instruction. As proposed by the provision of the new law, it is made the duty of the Superintendent to apportion the School Fund among the several counties of the State by adding together the whole number of unmarried free white children between the ages of six and twenty years reported by the school commissioner, and the average number who attended the Common Schools during the preceding year, and dividing the sum of the two into the total of the revenue to be apportioned, the quotient being the proratum of distribution throughout the State.

The revenues of the School Fund are to be used exclusively for the benefit of Common Schools; whatever expenses may be incurred according to law, however, must be paid out of the gross revenue.

The apportionment of the fund on the basis of a census of the children of pupil ages alone, leaves no incentive to induce an interest in a general attendance on the Public Schools, and offers no reward to laudable industry and emulation. The reports of Assessors in determining the census of the children of pupil ages have been omitted, since they are generally very imperfect and unreliable. A well-organized and a well-administered school system, it is presumed, needs no other agencies than its own to complete its statistics and information.

Section 6, of the first Article provides that the State shall hereafter pay seven per cent. interest on the bonds issued to the Board of Education, instead of five, as heretofore. There is certainly no good reason why the State should not pay the market rates on these bonds; it will be readily admitted that five per cent. interest—the rate paid on the larger amount of these bonds—is not a just and adequate return for the school fund money.

The provisions of the eighth section, Art. IV., requires the Commissioner to pay the amounts due the different districts from the School Fund directly to the teacher, instead of distributing the same first to the Trustees. This method is an improvement of the old law, as the delays and inconveniences occasioned by paying the teachers through the Trustees, will be avoided.

Art. V. provides that there shall be a Board of Education organized in each county of the State, whose duty it shall be, to superintend the general interests of the Common Schools within their respective limits.

One of the most important changes made by the adoption of the proposed school laws, is the provision for the formation of new Districts suitable for the organization of District School Boards of Trustees. The school districts as now numbered and described, are to be retained under the name of sub-districts, subject to certain alterations, and new Districts are to be formed, embracing three or more sub-districts within their boundaries. Each of these Districts thus organized, is to have a School Board, composed of the Trustees of the several sub-districts. Each sub-district will elect only one Trustee instead of three as heretofore. The object aimed at in the reduction of the number of Trustees, is to get rid of such a multitude of officers as were entailed upon the system under the old "Trustee organization." By the method proposed, the number of officers is reduced nearly two-thirds, and it is necessary to elect but one efficient Trustee in each of the sub-districts. These Trustees, elected by the qualified voters of the sub-districts, will serve one year as under the old law, and constitute the District Boards, exercising jurisdiction within the boundaries of the respective Districts, which are hereafter to be formed. The Presidents of the various District School Boards in each county will constitute the County Board of Education.

Is It So?

MR. EDITOR:—I have heard that petitions are being gotten up in our county, praying our Legislative bodies, in session, to render null and void, or disregard the mandate of the people, in their choice at the late August election, to tax themselves, for the purpose of increasing the common school fund, for the benefit of white children. Is it so? Are those who fought so obstinately against the measure still dissatisfied with the result? What would they have? Was it not brought fairly before the people? Did not every elector have ample time to consider, and did he not calmly deposit his ballot? Was not the "Act," printed in large, legible type, posted up at every Precinct for twenty days or more preceding the election? Was it not the understanding that the voice of the people should be irrevocable? Was not wealth, influence and all other real and fancied arguments brought to bear against it? Such as these, especially: It is taxing the rich for the benefit of the poor. It is a Yankee scheme to draw money out of honest men to educate lazy whites and negroes. It is unjust and wrong to tax the wealthy counties of our State for the benefit of the fifty-three pauper counties that will receive money, with which to learn their children to be rogues, having had the example set them by these favoring the tax. The laboring classes, "the niggers and white niggers," will grow indolent, and instead of performing the drudgery of capitalists, will endeavor to make a living by theft. One gentleman of honor and high standing, in the course of an address, in which he labored to show popular education was a dangerous thing, made use of, about this language: "The people have no right to vote upon such an issue. It should be determined by those who represent them at their capital. It was only submitted to the people, that they might set the signal of disapproval upon it, which those who voted for its submission were sure they would do. And indeed, the Legislative Branch of our State government is too weak. It should be vested with more power. Especially should it have the right to act upon measures of such minor importance as this school tax, considering the people are incapable to decide such matters."

But the day for argument passed. The people spoke, and the majority "For School Tax" was numbered by thousands; ever old Harriton, (not a pauper,) gave a majority of fifty-two in its favor.

Now, will gentlemen try to defeat a measure the people would have a law? It is hoped they will not. There are comparatively but few persons that this law will oppress. Who are they? They are those who feel that what I have mine, and "by my wisdom have I gotten all this." Who never think that a good and just God is the owner of "the earth and the fullness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein," and that He will one day take account of all those little items. Who feel independent of their fellow creatures. Who never utter that simple prayer, "God help the poor." Who think there is no such thing as capital in labor. Who can see the laborer that reaps their fields, and makes their fires go half clad, yet laboring still in sunshine and storm for the small pittance of seventy-five cents or one dollar per day, his children growing up in ignorance, his wife in rags, happy if by all their united efforts they can keep above actual want. Who feel it to be a condescension to visit were the wine doth not flow from silver decanters, and shades of Ham doth not cast their wonted gloom around the sumptuous board. Who think their children are in poor company, when attending common schools. Who think there is no disgrace in all the catalogue of shame so low, so degrading, so miserable as penury. Yes, these, and these only are the ones who will feel the oppression. I pity them. Poor, penurious, miserable, money-making, money-loving beings! Their lot is a hard one, and reminds me very much of his alluded to in these lines:

"And greedy Avarice by him did ride, Upon a camel laden with gold,
Two iron coffers hung on either side, With precious metal full as they could hold,
And in his lap a heap of coin he told;
For of his wicked self he God he made,
And unto hell himself for money sold; Accursed usury was all his trade;
And right and wrong in equal (balance weighed.)"

Distillers' Convention.

In obedience to a call of the Executive Committee, the distillers of the State of Kentucky assembled in convention in the city of Lexington, on the 18th day of January, 1870, for the purpose of securing harmony of action, on the part of the distillers of the State, in all questions affecting their interests as distillers, and to establish a co-operative system for economy of expenditure in the adjustment of their relations with the revenue officers of the United States. On motion, Dr. J. M. Duke, of Maysville, was called to the chair, and J. L. Cassell, elected Secretary, when on a call nearly all the distillery firms in the State, were found represented.

Whereupon the foregoing resolutions were adopted:

The special objects of said Association shall be:

1st. To protect our interests as distillers from the influence of bad legislation, and to secure and maintain harmony of purpose and of action between the honest officers of the United States, and the honest distillers of this State.

2d. To secure the passage by Congress, at as early a day as possible, of the necessary acts to modify the existing laws, in the manner suggested by us, in convention, in the city of Lexington, November 3d, 1869.

3d. To secure the services of a competent attorney, who is well versed in Revenue Law, at a regular annual salary, whose duty it shall be (without extra charge to any member of the Association) to reside in Washington City during each session of Congress, and advocate before that body such legislation as will promote our best interests as distillers, and oppose such as conflicts with them; who shall at all times furnish to the members of this Association the rulings of the Department of Revenue; any information of value affecting our business, and especially to give legal advice to any member of the Association desiring the same, on any question that may arise in the course of his business; and who shall prepare and prosecute any claim that a member of the Association may have against the United States for the abatement or refunding of taxes.

offer this expression as an earnest of our intention to act in harmony with the Revenue Department—to obey the law, and to secure a full collection of the tax on every gallon of spirits made in the country.

9th. That in any distillery, where the mashing is done by hand, sixty gallons of mash or beer should be allowed to represent one bushel of grain.

10th. That in any sour mash distillery, where the mashing is done by hand, the period of fermentation ought to be fixed at not less than seventy two hours from the time the mash is broken up and emptied into the fermenting vats or tubs, and that the period should be made uniform throughout the country.

11th. That we tender our thanks to Hon. C. Delano for the interest exhibited in our condition by sending Department Commissioner Givens to this State, and pledge ourselves to stand by him in a rigid and impartial enforcement of the law. We regard our interests and those of the government as identical, and desire no change in the law except in those provisions experience has proved an oppressor and vexation, and which causes a loss to the government as well as to us, by checking our production.

While conferring on the resolutions, Colonel William Brown, who has been acting as Agent for the Kentucky distillers at Washington City, made a very lucid and satisfactory report of progress, after which the foregoing resolutions were adopted, when, on motion, the convention adjourned, subject to the call of the Executive Committee.

[From the Kentucky People.
Simply Hellish.

One of the most atrocious acts that ever disgraced the name of Man, was committed last Saturday night in the Northern part of Washington county upon a modest and respectable young lady, by eight creatures bearing human semblance. We will not call them men; for wicked as man may be, they dishonor the name.

On the right mentioned, these demons armed themselves with pistols and went to the house of an old gentleman named Norvell, residing in the Northern part of Washington county; and entering in a boisterous and violent manner, forbade any of the family to speak on penalty of instant death. Before, however, they had fully developed their diabolical design, a son of the old gentleman came in, having been absent on business. He was instantly shot by one of the band, though not seriously, as we are informed.

Now comes the darkest, direst aspect of this cruel and most horrible picture. With the monstrous ingenuity of utter devilishness which delights in exasperating the effects of evil deeds, these fiends compelled the parents of the lady to remain in the room. Then, in the presence of the aged and feeble parents and of the disabled and bleeding brother, these eight devils, blind to the tears and deaf to the appeals of the father and mother, heedless of the struggles, the cries, the frantic supplications, the pleadings for mercy! mercy! of the helpless girl, they—heart, be still as we write the words!—they each of them, committed that unspeakable crime which blasts the life of woman as the red-hot lava consumes the vine leaf or the rose.

After this, they went away, singing a vulgar song. Their victim is now dangerously ill.

Some six hours after the commission of the crime, the news reached the Sheriff of the county, when he summoned a posse of forty men and started in pursuit of the wretches. He succeeded in capturing five of them, and went in pursuit of the other three. The five who were taken, have been carried to Springfield jail.

Comment upon such a deed is unnecessary. Theft may be committed; let the law take its course. The incendiary may burn a dwelling and drive the family out into the rain or snow; let him be punished as the law directs. The murderer may shoot down a man upon some lonely road, or through the window as he sits by his fireside, let him be hung upon the verdict of jury and sentence of the judge. But this crime upon woman—a crime for which our language fails to find adequate expression—what shall we say of it? From the heart of every man who reveres his father; who has not forgotten the mother's breast that cradled him and the mother's love that knew no sacrifice too great for her child—who would keep the person of his sister sacred from brutal touch and her good name untarnished by slanderous word—from the heart of every such man, there comes but one word, and that word is VENGEANCE!

N. B.—Since the above was written, we have learned that of the villains who perpetrated that terrible crime, Jim. Hatchett, Bill Hatchett, John Hatchett, Berry Hatchett, and another, whose name our informant did not know, have been captured.

Let Common Sense Decide.

What is the rational mode of procedure in cases of general debility and nervous prostration? Doctors would tell you that judicious stimulation is required. To resort to violent purgation in such a case is as absurd as it would be to bleed a starving man. Yet it is done every day. Yes, this stupid and unphilosophical practice is continued in the teeth of the great fact that physical weakness, with all the nervous disturbances that accompany it, is more certainly and rapidly relieved by Allen's Stomach Bitters than by any other medicine at present known. It is true that general debility is often attended with torpidity or irregularity of the bowels, and that this symptom must not be overlooked. But while the discharge of the waste matter of the system is expedited or regulated, its vigor must be recruited. The Bitters do both. They combine aperient and antibilious properties, with extraordinary tonic power. Even while removing obstructions from the bowels, they tone and invigorate those organs. Through the stomach, upon which the great vegetable specific acts directly, it gives a healthy and permanent impetus to every enteric function. Digestion is facilitated, the filtering circulation regulated, the blood reinforced with a new accession of the alimentary principle, the nerves braced, and all the dormant powers of the system roused into healthy action; not spasmodically, as would be the case if a mere stimulant were administered, but for a continuance. It is in this way that such extraordinary changes are wrought in the condition of the feeble, debilitated and nervous invalids by the use of this wonderful corrective, alterative and tonic. Let common sense decide between such a preparation and a precatory cathartic supported by a poisonous astringent like stychnine or quinia.

Here she suffered and died, but there she reigns in triumph. What a happy change from a world of sorrow and affliction, to that land where sin will be no more. Kind friends placed her body in the grave, while loving parents buried their hopes in the same tomb. May her parents and brothers be comforted with the assurance that dear Nannie has a home with the bright Angels in Heaven. May they so live and act that when the last morning dawns, they may meet the loved one in the presence of their great Redeemer, where they shall never be parted from her society, but share with her an endearing glory. The only Reliable Cure for Dyspepsia in the known World.

DR. WISHART'S GREAT AMERICAN DYSPEPSIA Pills and Powders. These Pills are a positive and infallible cure for dyspepsia in its most aggravated form, and no matter of how long standing.

They penetrate the secret shade of this terrible disease, and exterminate it, root and branch, forever.

They relieve more agony and silent suffering than tongue can tell.

They are useful for curing the most desperate and hopeless cases, when every known means fail to afford relief.

No form of dyspepsia can resist their penetrating power.

PINE TREE TAR CORDIAL.

It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree, obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of the tar, by which its highest medical properties are retained. It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite. It strengthens the debilitated system.
It purifies and enriches the blood, and expels from the system the corruption which scrofula breeds on the lungs. It dissolves the mucus or phlegm which stops the air passages of the lungs. Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs and throat, penetrating to each diseased part, relieving pain and subduing inflammation. It is the result of years of study and experiment, and it is offered to the afflicted with positive assurance of its power to cure the following diseases, if the patient has not too long delayed a resort to the means of cure.

Consumption of the Lungs, Cough, Sore Throat and Breast, Bronchitis, Liver Complaint, Bilious and Bleeding Piles, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Diphtheria, &c.

A medical expert, holding honorable collegiate diplomas, devotes his entire time to the examination of patients at the office parlors. Associated with him are three consulting physicians of acknowledged experience, whose services are given to the public FREE OF CHARGE.

This opportunity is offered by no other institution in the country.

Letters from any part of the country, asking advice, will be promptly and gratuitously responded to. Where convenient, remittances should take the shape of DRAFTS OR POST-OFFICE ORDERS.

Price of Wishart's American Dyspepsia Pills, $1 a box. Sent by mail on receipt of price.

Price of Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial,
